

Alison Jackson works her photography magic on 2016's headlines

The celebrity photographer gives us a glimpse into the private lives of the biggest names of 2016 - with a hefty dose of poetic licence

Alison Jackson

By Henry Wong | 22 December 2016

2016 has been a whirlwind. From Brexit to Trump to the Queen's birthday there is no denying that this year has had its moments.

Photographer Alison Jackson gives us a glimpse of what happened – with a hefty dose of poetic licence. Jackson uses 'squint and they're the same' body doubles and imagines their private lives.

Trump is the man of the moment. From his campaign trail to partying post-election, his imagined antics have provided her with endless inspiration

In Jackson's world Blair takes his chance to edit the Chilcott Report, Boris fixes one of his eponymous bikes in the foreign office, Trump and Farage celebrate with Champagne and lobster.

READ MORE Fake that! Meet Alison Jackson, the spoof-celebrity photographer

The only constant is the Queen, whose 'double' is seen opening a mountain of birthday post. David Cameron is surrounded by less happy news – writing leaving cards.

Copyright Alison Jackson / Copyright Alison Jackson

Click through the gallery above to see more of Jackson's ingenious shots from 2016.

Private: Alison Jackson is available to buy now at alisonjackson.com