

Sven gets his hands on the World Cup!

It is hardly the abiding image that Bobby Moore gave us in 1966 as he rode the shoulders of team-mates clutching the World Cup.

But if history were to repeat itself in Berlin in a few weeks time, then who could deny the manager a little fun with his players?

At least Sven-Goran Eriksson appears to have a firm grip on the most important item as he frolics in the team bath with Beckham, Rooney, Owen and Co.

And despite his naked abandon, the pose is positively dignified when compared with the snap of him practising Spanish guitar wearing only a waistcoat, posing pouch and socks.

The candid camera, which also captured Eriksson offering David Beckham a few grooming tips, and a bedroom shot of the manager's girlfriend Nancy Dell'Olio adjusting her cleavage, was gathering material for a TV trailer promoting a comedy documentary to be screened on the More4 channel next month.

Entitled Sven: The Coach, The Cash And His Lovers, it is a satire based on the career of the controversial England boss. Produced by the makers of A Very Social Secretary, the comedy drama about David Blunkett, it will mix documentary interviews with reconstructions shot in voyeuristic style.

Photographer and director Alison Jackson, who made her name with the spoof TV show Double Take, created the images with the help of lookalikes.

Miss Jackson has previously turned her lens on celebrities, politicians and the Royal Family.

Viewers will be treated to 'previously unseen' footage and imaginary moments based on stories of Eriksson's past, including dressing room antics with Beckham and discussions with his FA bosses.

There are also some raunchier moments with his lovers Miss Dell'Olio, Ulrika Jonsson and former FA secretary Faria Alam.

The real-life Miss Alam is interviewed for the programme, along with Ron Atkinson, Graeme Le Saux, Les Ferdinand and Max Clifford.
