

M News ▸ UK News ▸ Prince Harry

Cover your crown jewels, boys! 'Prince William' and 'Prince Harry' bare all for cancer charity

Celebrity lookalike photographer Alison Jackson mocked up these saucy snaps for the Everyman male cancer campaign

SHARE

By Natalie Evans US Editor (Digital)
17:46, 29 FEB 2012 | UPDATED 11:56, 25 SEP 2012

NEWS

 (Image: Alison Jackson)

What would their grandmother the Queen say if she saw these saucy snaps of William and Harry?

With just a trophy and a towel covering their crown jewels, the princes celebrate a polo win by stripping naked in a changing room.

While the Duke of Cambridge protects his modesty as he dries off, Harry celebrates in true party prince style by spraying a bottle of champagne around the room.

Unfortunately, these pictures aren't real but cleverly mocked-up by celebrity lookalike photographer Alison Jackson.

The 51-year-old artist photographed the two 'royals' as part of a campaign for male testicular and prostate cancer charity, Everyman.

The charity has joined forces with Cosmopolitan women's magazine to convince a host of male celebrities to strip for the good cause.

Jackson has previously staged snaps of the Royal family, including Harry and Pippa Middleton spending the night together after the Royal Wedding.

The double-take images were shot for Universal Pictures to plug the DVD and Blu-ray release of Bridesmaids in November.