Katy Perry and Rihanna throw a tea party on the tube! (Where were you, eh?)

We'd just got on at London Bridge when these two sauntered aboard baring cakes and lollies. Hang on, what do you mean 'they're fake'? The cupcakes?

CELEBS

Ooh, these are good pictures. It's not everyday you catch two international pop stars cuddled up together, eating cupcakes on the Jubilee Line, but look - there they are!

Rihanna and Katy Perry were snapped gallivanting around London by Alison Jackson looking very pretty and like good cupcake Samaritans. They're even pictured feeding each other strawberries in the back of a black cab, which, considering Katy recently said she'd be quite up for sleeping with her mate, is pretty damn suggestive. Bet that cabbie re-tells that story for the next 14 years. He's probably telling it right now in fact.

Oh, alright, it isn't really them. It's just two very good lookalikes. And we'll admit it we were totally confused. This is actually the conversation we had in the office when we saw these:

"I thought Rihanna wasn't able to come to Britain?"

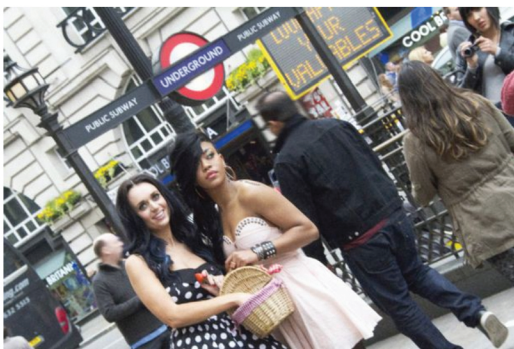

"What?"

"She's here on the tube..."

"You're an idiot."

Photographer Alison Jackson has taken the snaps for Breast Cancer Care's fundraising campaign 'Strawberry Tea Party'. She's the snapper who always takes brilliant spoof celebrity pics like the one she did of David Beckham and Tony Blair in a sauna. Remember? No? Oh.

Katy Perry was recently in the UK, performing and schmoozing her new fella, Florence and the Machine guitarist, Robert Ackroyd.
